There's a module
for that.

Happy Birthday
Drupel

2001 January 15

“Today, drop.org announces the release of Drupal 1.00 [...]. Drupal is a full-featured content management/discussion engine using Apache/PHP/MySQL and suitable to setup a news-driven community or portal site [...]. Current features include discussion forums, web-based administration, theme support, an open submission queue, content management, a modularized design, [...] backend/headline generation (RSS/RDF) and much more.”

By task

By module

Welcome to the administration section. Here you may control how your site functions.

Hide descriptions

Content management

Manage your site's content.

Categories

Create vocabularies and terms to categorize your content.

Comments

List and edit site comments and the comment moderation queue.

Content

View, edit, and delete your site's content.

Content types

Manage posts by content type, including default status, front page promotion, etc.

Post settings

Control posting behavior, such as teaser length, requiring previews before posting, and the number of posts on the front page.

RSS publishing

Configure the number of items per feed and whether feeds should be titles/teasers/full-text.

Site building

Control how your site looks and feels.

Blocks

Configure what block content appears in your site's sidebar and other regions.

Menus

Control your site's navigation menu, primary links and secondary links, as well as rename and reorganize menu items.

Modules

Enable or disable add-on modules for your site.

Themes

Change which theme your site uses or allows users to set.

Site configuration

Adjust basic site configuration options.

Administration theme

Settings for how your administrative pages should look.

In the year 2000, on May 18, in the first commit to the CVS repository that still holds the Drupal project — back when Drupal was called drop — Drupal founder Dries Buytaert included a file called rdf.php.

Placed in the root directory of the young CMS, this file had an object-oriented implementation of a basic RDF-focused XML parser and had an RDF headline generator.

A month later it was replaced with a more general framework geared to RSS-style XML.

RSS

<acronym
title="Really Simple Syndication (or something like that)">RSS</
acronym>

FTW

<acronym
title="For The Win)">FTW</

I mean nothing without human provided content

Other web sites don't understand me text and presentation markup

displayed by many machines, read by few

only people understand my output
When I want Data I screen scrape

Dries Buyteart's priorities (as mentioned in a bar in Boston) for Semantic information in Drupal core are as follows:

1. Dublin core.
2. SIOC.
3. Match up RDFa output options to fields (with CCK in core)
4. Export straight RDF also for same data
5. Drupal 8: Import RDF!

whom to credit

Stéphane Corlosquet

- contributing to Drupal for more than 2 years in various ways:
- - core patches
- - maintainer of some contributed modules (SIOC, tasklist, RDFCCK, evoc, Neologism)
- - member of the Drupal security team
- - local and national Irish Drupal user group

Drupal has a lot of RDF modules, although much is in development, alpha, or beta; here are some more modules relating to RDF:

- <http://drupal.org/project/sioc>
- <http://drupal.org/project/rdf>
- <http://drupal.org/project/relations>
- http://drupal.org/project/views_datasource
- All modules tagged with RDF on Drupal.org (log in to filter these by Drupal 6):

in brief:

As long as people had to handcode
HTML to blog and comment,
there was no interactive web.

As long as people have to painstakingly make meaning of their informatino machine-readable,
there will be no semantic web.
